SPRING SESSION EVALUATED

The new Spring Session, with its enrolment this year of more than 1,200 students, has brought the University one step closer to year-round operation of classes, says S. C. T. CLARKE, Director of the Summer Session and Evening Credit Program.

In a report prepared by Dr. Clarke, the spring session is described as "another milestone in the growth of our University" and as a "feasible and worthwhile aspect of University operation." It was originally planned for 600 students with 30 sections of full course equivalents but was expanded to 40½ full course equivalents to accommodate the 1,241 students who registered. Enrolments in the various faculties and schools were: Education, 664; Arts, 217; Science, 110; Graduate Studies and Research, 75; Business Administration and Commerce, 73; Nursing, 32; and other, 70.

A questionnaire was distributed during the second week of spring session classes, and 1,047 were returned. The results, compiled by the Office of Institutional Research and Planning, led to the following conclusions:

1. The majority of students attended the previous winter session (888 out of 1,047).
2. About half of the students were registered in summer session (534).
3. About a quarter of the students would have attended summer session if there had not been a spring session (270).
4. The vast majority of students enrolled in order to accelerate their program. Reasons given for taking spring session courses were:
 - a. To complete requirements for a degree or certificate (291)
 - b. To graduate early (290)
 - c. To pick up deficient course or credit (244)
 - d. To lighten load for winter (56)
 - e. Personal interest (course not required but related to program) (47)
 - f. Other (75)

The evaluation indicated that students would like to see the spring session expanded to include just about every course not already offered. They also expressed a dire need for longer library hours (the hours were subsequently extended) and a day care centre.

In addition to the sessions and evening credit programs now offered, there is a special post-summer session from August 14 to 31 which provides two courses in intercultural education, largely for teachers of Indian, Eskimo, and Metis children in Alberta and the Northwest Territories. Says Dr. Clarke, "Continuous operation of classes which can be justified by enrolment is a fact at The University of Alberta."

89 AVENUE CLOSED

The Campus Development Office has announced that 89 Avenue will be permanently closed, between 114 and 115 Streets, on Monday, August 14. The area will be landscaped, as part of the plan to limit through traffic on the campus, and provide more pedestrian areas.

UNIVERSITY PRINTERS DISCUSS FUTURE

The Fifth Annual Conference of the Canadian Association of College and University Printers was held here at the end of July, drawing 47 representatives from points across Canada. The three-day program included workshops, films, and detailed studies of the needs and problems of both large and small printing operations.

J.R.T. GRANT, Co-ordinator of the University's Printing Services, said many of the representatives expressed interest in converting their operations from linotype to computer typesetting, a change which is now being considered at this University.

July's flash thunderstorms took their toll on a tree north of the Administration Building. A large branch snapped off in the wind, leaving the tree with a scar and a lop-sided appearance.
